ROYAL BRITISH LEGION

We're here to help

The Royal British Legion Admiral Nurse service offers specialist support and advice to families caring for people living with dementia.

The service aims to help family carers gain the skills needed to assist with their loved one's care and promotes a positive approach to living well with dementia. As registered nurses specialising in dementia, Admiral Nurses help carers improve their quality of life, which in turn improves the life of the person they're caring for, and the wider family too.

Every circumstance is different, and our service provision reflects that. Depending on assessed need, families can access help in a variety of ways including telephone or face to face support, and through clinics attached to RBL care homes and other venues.

We work with our partner Dementia UK, a national charity focused on supporting carers of people living with dementia.

Are you eligible?

To qualify for this service, the family carer or the person living with dementia needs to be a beneficiary of the RBL.

Beneficiaries are those who have served in the British Armed Forces and their immediate family and carers.

How can this service help you?

RBL Admiral Nurses work in partnership with carers, families and people living with dementia. The services they offer include:

Person-centred assessments of the needs of the carers, families and individuals living with dementia

Psychological support to help with feelings and emotions

Therapeutic, educational and social support carer groups

Helping carers to develop and improve skills in care giving

Liaison with other professionals and organisations to ensure that families obtain coordinated support

Guidance on how appropriate services and sources of support can be accessed locally

Admiral Nurses can connect you to further RBL advice and support across matters such as finance, physical and mental wellbeing, social issues, employment, housing and independent living.
